It's Your Money

by Todd Brisbois

THE ECONOMIC IMPACT PAYMENT SCHEME

This is currently the highest volume email scheme the IRS is seeing. Email messages are hitting inboxes with titles like: "Third Round of Economic Impact Payments Status Available." The IRS routinely sees hundreds of taxpayers forwarding these messages each day; the IRS has seen thousands of these emails reported in the last year.

The third round of Economic Impact Payments occurred in 2021, more than two years ago. And this particular scheme, which plays off this real-world tax event, has been around since then. But while the stimulus payments ended long ago, the related scheme has evolved and changed as scam artists look for new ways to adjust their message to trick people.

Taxpayers shouldn't be fooled by this message for many reasons. For example, these emails are routinely riddled with spelling errors and factual inaccuracies, like this example:

"Dear Tax Payer, We hope this message finds you well. We are writing to inform you about an important matter regarding your recent tax return filing. Our record indicate that we have received your tax return for the fiscal inconsistencies or missing information that require your attention and clarification. You will receive a tax refund of $976.00. We will process this amount once you have submitted the document we need for the steps to claim your tax refund.

Sender: INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE"

Like many scams, this email urges people to click on a link so they can complete their "application." Instead, it takes the taxpayer to a website where identity thieves will try to harvest valuable personal information.

Bryson earns prestigious Gold Award from Girl Scouts

WALTHAM — Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts, the largest girl serving organization in Massachusetts, is pleased to announce that Wilmington Girl Scout Hannah Bryson earned their Girl Scout Gold Award. Nearly 40 Girl Scouts from eastern Massachusetts took action to tranform their world by investing over hundreds of hours creating lasting impact on issues important to them.

The Gold Award is the highest and most prestigious award a Girl Scout can earn. It is available to youth in high school who create sustainable change on a community or world issue, from teen nutrition to mental health to environment sustainability. Gold Award Girl Scouts address the root cause of a problem, plan and implement innovative solutions to drive change, and lead a team of people to success.

This year, Gold Award Girl Scout Hannah Bryson was awarded for her work on their community project titled Women in Wrestling Workshop.

Hannah's love for wrestling was so great that for her Gold Award project, she wanted to address the lack of girls participating in the sport. She hoped that by encouraging younger girls to engage in wrestling, she might lessen the industry's prevalent gender gap.

Hannah teamed up with her martial arts instructor to lead summer camp and wintertime clinics for girls in first to eighth grade. Through these programs, Hannah was able to connect with dozens of young wrestlers who expressed an interest in continuing with the sport.

Hannah's Gold Award project will be sustained beyond her involvement by her martial arts instructor and the head coach of her school's wrestling team, who will continue to provide and advocate for equal opportunity for girls in wrestling.

When asked about their Gold Award project, Hannah stated, "I learned that I am a leader and a role model. I was able to lead a large group of young girls as well as a team of coaches."

For more information on Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts, please visit their website, www.gsema.org, or follow their social media channels, Instagram, Facebook, and LinkedIn for the latest updates on the organization.

Have a 'slice' of fun at the 2024 Boston Pizza Festival

By HEATHER BURNS
News Correspondent

Pizza has long been known as a slice of heaven on earth. A combination of cheese and toppings smothered on a crip and hearty dough can truly be a heavenly cuisine experience.

Now imagine adding dozens of choices and varieties of this cheesy goodness surrounded by the fun and excitement of a festival atmosphere.

Luckily, this pizza dream is a reality you can obtain by attending the 2024 Boston Pizza Festival on June 22 and 23.

The 2024 Boston Pizza Festival is celebrating its sixth year and attracts nearly 20,000 visitors each year by connecting communities through the comradery and love that often comes with sharing a pizza with family and friends.

Located in the heart of Boston at City Hall Plaza, this two-day, outdoor event offers much more than a day of eating pizza.

Inspired by the outdoor pizzarias of Napoli, this event features dozens of pizzarias offering the best made to order pizzas the City of Boston has to offer.

The combination of Boston's best local pizzas with some of the oldest pizzerias from Naples, Italy make this a food experience like no other.

Notable pizzarias include Starita a Materdel and Lombardi 1892, both have been producing award winning pizza in Naples for over 100 years.

This year's festival promises to be better than ever, offering lots of entertainment including live music, pizza making demonstrations, and acrobat shows from the world champion pizza spinners.

Attendants of the festival will also vote to pick the pizza that will be awarded Best Pizza in Boston.

Doors are open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. on both Saturday, June 22 and Sunday, June 23. Entry to this event is free, but if you are planning on sampling the many pizzas available at the festival, keep in mind this year's event is cashless.

To reduce the work and confusion of accepting cash or credit cards, the Pizza Festival will be selling Pizza Ticket packages in different "slice" denominations which will allow consumers to buy pizza by the slice.

Keep in mind when purchasing your Pizza Ticket package that there are no refunds for unused pizza slice tickets, so be sure to choose your package denomination wisely.

Pizza Tickets for slices can be purchased online in advance at www.bostonpizzafestival.com.

The Pizza Festival has a warm and welcoming atmosphere and pizza lovers of all ages are welcome. However, there are certain rules and restrictions in place to assure everyone has a fun and safe time.

For security reasons, guests are asked to keep personal items to a minimum. No bags, backpacks or purses larger than a wristlet will be permitted. Expect lines for a safety screening process before visitors can enter the venue.

Public transportation is recommended, but there is also ample parking available at the Government Center Garage, located at 50 New Sudbury St., or the Center Plaza Garage, located at 75 Somerset St. in Boston.

This summer let all your tomato and mozzarella dreams come true by attending the 2024 Boston Pizza Festival. It promises to deliver authentic Italian pizza, as well as a day of family fun under the city sun.

Rep. Nguyen's coercive control legislation, part of legislative package, passes House

BOSTON — This week, the Massachusetts House and Senate passed comprehensive legislation that will help to prevent abuse and exploitation, while also enhancing protections for survivors. One of the crucial measures in the bill is an expansion of the definition of abuse to include coercive control for the purposes of obtaining a restraining order filed by State Representative Tram T. Nguyen (D-Andover).

Coercive control is defined as a nonphysical form of abuse that is meant to restrict someone's safety and autonomy, often through financial, technological, and emotional means. This form of abuse is a way of making someone feel powerless and dependent on their abuser.

Examples include threatening to share explicit images, regulating or monitoring a family or household member's communications and access to services, isolating a family or household member from friends or relatives, and threatening to harm their child or family pet.

Rep. Nguyen said, "Domestic violence is not always physical violence, sometimes it's much more insidious. During my time as a legal services attorney, I represented many survivors who suffered emotional trauma and financial devastation through fear and manipulation. Survivors and the courts need our help to update our laws to make it clear that coercive control is a type of domestic abuse that will not be tolerated. I want to thank Speaker Mariano and my colleagues for advancing this transformative legislation."

The legislation also extends the statute of limitations for assault and battery on a family or household member or against someone with an active protective order from six years to 15 years. This change brings the Massachusetts statute of limitations for these domestic violence offenses in line with the statute of limitations for rape, assault with intent to commit rape, and sex trafficking.

"It can take several years for survivors to recognize and process the emotional and psychological trauma that they have endured, before they are ready to begin a new chapter in their lives and seek legal protections. Increasing the statute of limitations will give survivors the time they need to seek justice," said Rep. Nguyen. "I am grateful for the partnership of Representative Natalie Higgins and Senator Michael Moore, who co-filed the bill with me, and to the brave survivors and advocates who spoke up for the thousands of women, men, and children in our Commonwealth who will be better able to take back control of their future."

The Together Rising Above Coercion Coalition (TRAC), a statewide coalition of survivors, advocates, and allies, has been actively supporting the coercive control legislation filed by Rep. Nguyen, Rep. Higgins (D-Leominster), and Sen. Moore (D-Millbury).

TRAC steering committee member Hema Sarang-Sieminski, policy director at Jane Doe Inc. said, "Abuse is rooted in systems of power and control. When we fail to address non-physical forms of abuse — psychological, emotional, financial, legal, and technological — abusers will continue to intimidate, threaten, isolate, and monitor their victims, denying them their personal autonomy."

In applauding legislators on their passage of this bill, TRAC founder Carmen Aliber, emphasized that "Today's digital world with yesterday's laws makes abuse that much easier. Abusers don't typically change, so the law must protect survivors from being silenced, shamed, and smeared by their abusers. This new legislation will do just that, and we thank the initial bill sponsors Sen. Michael Moore, Rep. Natalie Higgins, and Rep. Tram Nguyen."

Other major provisions of this bill address teen sexting and image-based sexual assault, commonly referred to as "revenge porn."

Currently, minors who possess, purchase, or share explicit photos of themselves or other minors are charged with violating Massachusetts child pornography laws and are required to register as sex offenders. The legislation passed today instead authorizes commitment to the Department of Youth Services (DYS), but also allows minors to be diverted to an educational program in lieu of criminal punishment.

However, a district attorney can petition the court to bring criminal charges in extreme cases.

Under this bill, image-based sexual assault or revenge porn, the distribution of explicit images of someone without their consent, will be a crime under the criminal harassment statute. Through the coercive control provision, a survivor may petition the court for a harassment prevention order against a person who has violated this statute.

The legislation also responds to the growing trend of individuals utilizing artificial intelligence and other digital imaging software to produce "deep fakes" of unsuspecting victims, a practice currently not prohibited under state law. These images, which are equally traumatizing to victims, often realistically depict a person's face edited onto an unclothed body, making it challenging or impossible for viewers to determine what is reality.

With these important updates to the laws, Massachusetts will become the seventh state to protect survivors of coercive control and join 48 other states that have specific criminal penalties for revenge porn.

An Act to prevent abuse and exploitation passed unanimously in the House (156-0) and Senate (38-0). It is on the governor's desk for her signature.

Book Stew Review

'A Good Hard Look' by Ann Napolitano

By EILEEN MACDOUGALL

Readers frequently will find pleasure in perusing a popular author's back catalogue. This is certainly true for Ann Napolitano, who wrote the recent acclaimed novels "Dear Edward" and "Hello Beautiful."

This one, from 2012, in audio book format, and read by outstanding narrator Debra Monk, is an incredible fictional saga featuring a non-fictional character, the renowned author Flannery O'Connor.

Based primarily in the then-small town of Milledgeville, GA in the early 1960's, two couples are the focus: Cookie, a hometown beauty resentful of Flannery's literary success and frightened by the feelings evoked by her novel and stories; her husband Melvin, a transplanted NYC native who is fascinated by Flannery, her devotion to Catholicism and faith and her flock of noisy peacocks; Lona Waters, a local seamstress who falls in love with her high school senior helper Joe; and all the parents and friends who make Milledgeville a cauldron of underlying drama for the reader.

Flannery is just one of the characters that make this study of the mysterious lives of the famous and humble so riveting and such essential reading.

Another recent spotlight on O'Connor is found in the new movie Wildcat, directed by Ethan Hawke and starring his daughter Maya Hawke, which is also set in Milledgeville and smoothly blends incidents from O'Connor's real life with the plots of her notorious short stories.

Mass. Antique Fire Apparatus Association show

By HEATHER BURNS
News Correspondent

WILMINGTON — On Saturday, June 29, 2024, The Massachusetts Antique Fire Apparatus Association will hold their 47th Anniversary Antique Fire Apparatus Parade and Show at the Shriners Auditorium located at 99 Fordham Road in Wilmington.

The Mass Antique Fire Apparatus Association was founded as a group in 1977 as a local chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Appreciation of Antique Motorized Fire Apparatus in America (SPAAMFAA). The main chapter is located in Syracuse, NY, and the purpose of this organization is to promote and preserve Antique Motorized Fire Apparatus.

The MAFAA board is expecting over 50 pieces of fire equipment to participate in the parade from all over Massachusetts. With the addition of the Shriners Fire Brigade golf carts and clowns, the board members are anticipating the parade to be a fun family event for all to experience.

The parade starts promptly at 10 a.m. on Eames Street, then turns right onto Main Street (Rt. 38) to Wilmington Center, then proceeds right on Rt. 62 to Federal Street, to Concord Street, to Fordham Street, ending at the Shriners Auditorium.

After the parade, the participating fire apparatus will be on display in the parking lot of the auditorium for the public to view, and many fire apparatus owners and "crew" will be available to answer questions and relate details about each vehicle.

A Firematic Flea Market will be set up inside the Shriners Auditorium and consists of dozens of vendors selling fire related gifts, toys, collectables, antiques and more. This is a great place to find unusual or hard to find antique firefighting equipment, toys, diecast, books and collectables.

The Market will be open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and all fire apparatus will be on display from the arrival time after the parade of approximately 11 a.m. until 2 p.m.

There will also be model builders and plenty of food for sale that you can enjoy while browsing the event.

At the end of the day, awards will be announced for the outstanding fire apparatus in multiple categories.

Admission to the parade, flea market and fire apparatus display is free.

All proceeds for the day's event will go to the Shriners Transportation Fund. This fund assures no cost to patients or their families that require medical flights to Shriners Hospitals for treatment.

The MAFAA board members welcome the public to celebrate the history of firefighting at this family fun event and to participate in the historical education the MAFAA has to offer.

Currently, the MAFAA has approximately 150 members, and welcomes anyone with an interest in the history of fire service or antique vehicles to join. You do not have to own a fire apparatus to become a member, just an interest in preserving the rich history of fire fighting.

32 students recognized with biliteracy awards

becoming future college athletes in sports including but not limited to baseball, lacrosse, soccer, swimming, football, dance, and volleyball.

32 students were recognized with biliteracy awards. There were a combined 64 post-secondary educational institutions named which students in the graduating class had chosen to attend. It also recognized seven students entering an industry, two in the armed forces, and future teachers and educators.

Later, high school principal Ryan Gendron shared that the main update in the high school handbook regarded the new schedule, but there were also updates for lunch prices, course level expectations, and the title of flex block and a few clubs.

Jay Samaha asked about language relating to grading and artificial intelligence. Gendron explained that they were trying to remove all language around grading, but they did have a policy which could be added or referred to about artificial intelligence.

David Ragsdale suggested they rename the STE MCAS to simply Science, which is now more accurate for the MCAS at the high school level.

Dr. Mike Mercaldi asked how well the current electronic devices policy is working. Gendron described that most teachers either provide clearcut expectations and others expect them to be out of sight and out of mind. He said that rarely does administration have to enforce either expectation.

Ragsdale asked about progress made to deal with the known issue of chronic absenteeism. Gendron replied they developed in-house interventions and seen attendance, academic performance, and behavioral data all improve.

Brand suggested that there was an edit to a School Committee policy to be made which would impact the handbook.

Regarding the middle school handbook, Middle School Principal Dr. Jeanette Quirk explained that there were a few team leader positions added, along with a description of the parent and school advisory councils and the policy on entering the building early.

Edits were made to the schedule, the front cover, messages from the principal and assistant principals, lunch times, staff listing, and bus code of conduct.

Stephen Turner suggested the topic of electronic devices be revisited, not that night but in the future. He suggested the current language and approach — that students shouldn't bring their cell phones to school — would be off-putting.

He suggested that there be a middle ground between 4th and 5th grade and high school approaches, where the students can be focused on learning and teachers don't have to worry about whether the students are on their phones.

Brand commented that this wasn't an easy thing to tackle.

Quirk said that she would work with her colleagues and teachers on crafting new language in the fall. She also mentioned that the mission and vision statements were edited a few years ago.

Brand provided that these two handbooks would return to the committee for a second read and hopefully approved. He also explained that the committee only technically needed to approve the high school handbook, but he'd ask them to vote on the approval of the middle school handbook as well, if they were so inclined.

The committee meets next on Wednesday June 26 at 7 p.m.

Superintendent feedback to lead into goals

Brand's leadership of the MSBA project was excellent this year and put the project in the place it is today.

David Ragsdale emphasized that proficient is a high standard. However, he proposed that a paragraph in the combined evaluation suggesting that Brand make a goal toward communication using a performance measure be removed from the report.

"I don't think that reflects the rest of the evaluation or the comments of the committee," he said.

He protested to the criticism, as he felt that the comments were complementary overall on the progress made in communication, and he made a motion to vote to delete the paragraph.

Bryson replied they would've highlighted an area if a few comments said that the work needs improvement. She suggested instead that the subcommittee go back and clarify that comment further.

Mercaldi mentioned that they wanted to see the performance evaluation be used as a tool for continuous improvement which may be the reason for the comment.

Stephen Turner stated that he could see the logic on both sides, but he wasn't sure there was any more room for another superintendent goal related to communications.

Bryson continued to say that she wouldn't want to remove the whole paragraph but rather have the subcommittee see if they can revamp the language. It was their desire to create a process that allows the superintendent evaluation feedback to lead into the superintendent goals.

Ragsdale said that he opposed suggesting the superintendent goal, but he would be fine with having the committee look at it again. They then voted in favor of postponing their vote on the combined evaluation to allow the subcommittee to meet again and try to make edits for a second reading.

Bryson also encouraged the committee members to email the subcommittee if there were other areas of the combined evaluation they wanted to talk about specifically.

Jay Samaha thanked the subcommittee for the report, which he thought was thorough and an accurate reflection of Brand's performance. Turner added that the organization of the report was also helpful.

Brand stated there were only so many aspects of his work into which the committee had visibility. He appreciated the discussion of the committee and reminded them that he removed a few goals related to two-way communication for bandwidth purposes this past year.

Bryson added that they wanted to make this report a partnership document that provides Brand with what he needs in order to do his work.

Ragsdale went on to say that he could appreciate the challenge of summing up seven voices and thoughts into one. He commented that the subcommittee did a good job and that it wasn't an easy task to let the members' individualities come through while also creating a cohesive and helpful evaluation.

Fennelly said that he appreciated the feedback of the committee on the evaluation.

Bryson shared a similar sentiment, saying that she could tell that the committee really read the superintendent's evaluation thoroughly.

Early Learning Center and Wilmington kindergarten classrooms.

The tasks achieved as part of this project included creating the concept, illustrating the book, writing the story, getting the book printed, making puppets, creating the lesson plan, practicing delivery, and visiting the classrooms.

With each lesson, they had objectives for the students to be able to share their favorite characters, describe what they liked about the story, and draw a related picture. LaVita and Moore shared some of the drawings done by the students where they drew animals and wrote a sentence about them.

They observed how the lessons helped the kids remember what they were reading. They also enjoyed especially hearing the kids laugh during the puppet show and being able to combine art and writing.

Ragsdale asked what they learned about collaboration, and they replied that they thought through their ideas and realized which ones wouldn't work once they did. They wanted to write inclusive characters to whom the students could relate. The project came together as the two of them each had other ideas that didn't pan out.

High school principal Ryan Gendron commented at the end that so many students' projects made a similar impact on the community and tested future career plans. He described that the typical senior year fourth quarter is not a terribly productive time in schools, but this forward-thinking process lets them pursue their passions, ideas, and creativity and gain learning experiences.

He thanked the committee for providing a platform to showcase these projects and encouraged them to attend the upcoming project expo where more seniors will present. He said that he hopes to see this opportunity continue for students.

Winchester MBTA project wrapping up

By RYAN LAROCHE

WINCHESTER CENTER COMMUTER RAIL STATION - MBTA work continues along the Laraway Road section in Winchester as the transit authority gears up to finish the Winchester Center Commuter Rail Station. A new timeline has the MBTA partially reopening the station in late September and fully reopening it in December. (Bill Ryerson file photo)

Nearly four years ago, the MBTA began working on the Winchester Center Commuter Rail Station. This year, the transit authority seems ready to put the finishing touches on the project.

Back in February, representatives from the MBTA reaffirmed the plan to partially reopen the station by mid-July and fully reopen it by November. However, it now appears the MBTA will miss the July deadline.

According to Nathan Rae, Senior Project Manager for the MBTA, in an update given to the Select Board in Winchester this week, the transit authority now plans to partially reopen the station in late September with a full reopening planned for sometime in December.

A partial reopening would reopen part of the station (the south half, both inbound and outbound), plus one elevator on each side and return parking to the Aberjona and Waterfield lots.

Several reasons for the current delay include the MBTA losing the ability to single track and moving to foul time (from March 6 to May 8), a fiber optic resiliency project and north side commuter rail maintenance work.

In an effort to remain (or get back) on track, the transit authority altered the train schedule to reduce mid-day train service for additional construction access (March), rescheduled maintenance work (May), restored single tracking (May), added work crews, added work shifts on weekends and nights (as needed), and extended normal hours.

This project has been a long time coming, as the station has been in disrepair for 15 years. Back in 2009, the town reached out to the transit authority asking for "immediate attention" due to falling debris. Eventually, the Select Board had no choice but to close that portion of the ramp.

From then to before the MBTA finalized plans to repair the station, the Select Board had to authorize temporary fixes to prevent someone from getting hurt. The station remained open from 2009 until the MBTA finally began demolition and construction in 2021.

According to the MBTA itself, the project should have started in 2013, four years after the town first reported serious issues, and finished in 2015. At that time, it would have cost the transit authority $15M. It then could have started in 2017 for $30M. Today, the project will run the MBTA $50M (the town did pay out of its own pocket for some add-ons).

The main issue involved the MBTA reportedly tinkering with the design until, seemingly out of nowhere, they announced in 2019 they reached the 60 percent phase. A year later, the MBTA hit the 90 percent phase. In 2021, they received final approval for a demolition permit.

The project involves two new fully accessible, high-level, side platforms with canopies; three new elevators, two new ramps and three sets of covered stairs; new lighting, signage and way finding, security cameras, and other amenities; and new tracks, ties, ballast, bridge plates and communication duct banks.

Back in September of last year, Christopher Brennan of the MBTA first announced the transit authority planned to reopen the station in two phases: partially in July and fully in November. Unfortunately, the transit authority hit a few snags at that time. However, Brennan assured the board his goal remained finishing the project on time.

"We don't intend to miss the July date," he told the Select Board.

Now it appears they will miss the July date after all.

Last year, the MBTA faced a few delays including an interpretation issue with the state's plumbing inspector that led to the MBTA needing to go through the variance process with the state twice. That, Brennan said, took several months and led to a delay in the transit authority receiving certain permits.

The MBTA also faced supply chain issues, which Brennan said are now behind them and necessary equipment and parts were delivered a month later than expected.

The transit authority also installed a new signal system, which forced a redirection of some passenger service onto the Winchester Center rail line and the project team must clear the area when a train comes through.

Brennan, back in September, said the contractor has been trying to mitigate the delays and stay on schedule.

"We're on the hook financially," he said about the $50M price tag for which the MBTA is responsible. "It's not in our best interest to lallygag."

He suggested back in September that workers might have to work a little harder moving forward to make up for any lost time. To that proposal, the MBTA has worked and will continue to work on the weekends in June: June 1 and 2, June 8, 15, 22 and 29 from 7 a.m. - 7 p.m. Residents can expect deliveries to the site and construction vehicle noise. The MBTA plans to install granite stone and platform guardrails, plus finish some electrical work. They will also stage concrete trucks.

Andrew McCarthy's 'Brat Pack' documentary 'Brats'

By MARK KENNEDY
AP Entertainment Writer

He's 61 now, well-off and trim. He has many accomplishments as an actor but there's this one thing he finds hard to shake: Back in 1985, he got called something.

During the Reagan administration, rising star Andrew McCarthy was lumped into an amorphous group of young actors who were changing Hollywood. They were called the "Brat Pack."

Now, it's never nice to be called a "brat" or to lose your individuality to a pack, but McCarthy and the members of this collective — Emilio Estevez, Molly Ringwald, Demi Moore, Ally Sheedy, Judd Nelson, Rob Lowe and maybe Anthony Michael Hall — seemed to implode.

"That changed my life," says McCarthy, who starred in "Pretty in Pink" and "St. Elmo's Fire." After being branded, the so-called bratty actors scattered, not wanting to work together again. The stigma, McCarthy says, was "defining." He has PTSD, he suggests.

Now almost 40 years later, McCarthy hit the road to star in and direct his new Hulu documentary, "Brats," trying to get a handle on the label and how some of the pack handled it.

First stop is a wary Estevez, who acknowledges that the Brat Pack term had some early benefits but was ultimately "more damage than good."

"It created the perception that we were lightweights," he adds.

Then there are visits to Sheedy, Moore, Lowe, Jon Cryer, Tim Hutton and Lea Thompson — all who commiserate with McCarthy. (Ringwald and Nelson are notable absences, perhaps still nursing wounds.) These visits have the feeling of therapy sessions.

"Marty Scorsese, Steven Spielberg is not going to call up somebody who's in the Brat Pack," McCarthy tells Estevez, who admits to pulling out of a movie at the prospect of teaming up with McCarthy.

(Not to be rude, but the Brat Pack-adjacent Tom Cruise did a movie with Scorsese, "The Color of Money," Moore became the hottest thing in Hollywood in the '90s and Robert Downey Jr., also Pack-adjacent, just took home an Oscar.)

As he pays one former colleague after another a visit at their well-appointed homes, the heat of injustice has dissipated. Moore's estate with its tasteful wood panels, shaded pool, massive glass walls and Japanese-inspired minimalism doesn't exactly scream, "That label from 1985 really destroyed my life."

The doc is scored well, with songs by The Cure, Lou Reed and Steve Winwood, "Forever Young" by Alphaville and a haunting "Don't You (Forget About Me)" cover by Zoe Fox and the Rocket Clocks.

But McCarthy's visual style is too fragmented, happy to capture his scrambling camera and sound operators in the frame and changing up his shots from guerilla-style jerky iPhone images to tasteful, polished portraits. His use of old clips is excellent, incorporating not just scenes from movies but TV interview outtakes, too.

A more interesting thing happens in McCarthy's road movie by the halfway mark — it becomes a sort of celebration of Brat Pack movies. Cultural observer Malcolm Gladwell talks about the generational transition in Hollywood, while Susannah Gora, who wrote "You Couldn't Ignore Me If You Tried" about the Brat Pack's impact, notes that teens in the Midwest were singing British New Wave synth-pop tunes thanks to McCarthy.

Pop culture critic Ira Madison III zeroes in on the lack of diversity in Brat Pack movies, "Less Than Zero" writer Bret Easton Ellis notes the influence the movies had on his work, and screenwriter Michael Oates Palmer comments that Brat Pack movies were the first to take "young people's lives seriously."

These are the building blocks of a better movie — Gladwell cutely mentions that he used parts of Cryer's character Duckie from "Pretty in Pink" as his identity in high school — but McCarthy isn't willing to stray.

He comes across as a very thoughtful guy, able to quote Tennessee Williams and Eugene O'Neill, reserved, shy and wry, so often deep in his feelings. But this bratty label he cannot shake. He also wrote about it in "Brat: An '80s Story." It is his Moby Dick.

That analogy works when he finally harpoons his white whale — David Blum, who at 29 in 1985, hoping to snag some attention in the journalism world, coined the phrase "Brat Pack" — a flip play on the Rat Pack — for New York magazine.

McCarthy sits down with Blum at the conclusion of the film — the aggrieved actor and the journalist meeting for the first time four decades after being dragged into the '80s cultural lexicon. This is the "You can't handle the truth" moment.

And yet McCarthy is so nice that while he makes his case well, he sort of also understands Blum's position and kind of likes him, too. Will Blum finally admit that the label is scathing? "I mean, I guess in retrospect, yes. At the time, no. I was proud of the creation of the phrase," says the writer. They end their meeting with a hug.

Like a Brat Pack movie.

"Brats," a Hulu release, is not rated but has smoking, love scenes and swearing. Running time: 93 minutes. Two stars out of four.

HomeNewsHere RECIPE

Honey-Baked Sriracha Chicken Wings

HOT WINGS - To keep these sticky wings mellow, we used apricot jam, honey and a squeeze of fresh lime, to offset the heat of the Sriracha. Craving more heat? Add more hot sauce!

Ingredients

Chicken:

- 2 tablespoons Sriracha sauce
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly cracked pepper
- 3 lb chicken wing drummettes
- 1/2 cup Gold Medal™ all-purpose flour

Glaze:

- 1/4 cup honey
- 2 tablespoons apricot jam
- 2 tablespoons Sriracha sauce
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 2 teaspoons fresh lime juice
- 3 cloves garlic, finely chopped

STEPS

1. Heat oven to 425°F. Line 2 cookie sheets with sides with heavy-duty foil; spray with cooking spray.

2. In 1-gallon resealable food-storage plastic bag, mix Sriracha sauce, oil, salt, pepper and drummettes. Seal bag; shake to coat. Add flour; seal bag, and shake until drummettes are coated with flour. Place drummettes on cookie sheets.

3. Bake uncovered 30 minutes; turn drummettes over, and rotate cookie sheets. Bake 20 to 30 minutes longer or until golden brown and juice of drummettes is clear when thickest part is cut to bone (at least 165°F).

4. Meanwhile, in 1-quart saucepan, mix Glaze ingredients; heat to simmering over medium heat, stirring frequently, until slightly thickened, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat; set aside.

5. In large bowl, toss drummettes with sauce. Serve warm.

EXPERT TIPS

- Purchase already cut chicken wings in the meat or frozen foods section. They're sometimes called chicken drummies.
- Sriracha is a hot chili sauce that can be found in the Asian-foods section of large supermarkets. Use less for a milder sauce or more for a spicier version.

• WINCHESTER FROM B-1

The MBTA first shut down the station in January of 2021. However, no one seemed 100 percent sure the transit authority even had the money. Fortunately, for the town, State Senator Jason Lewis informed the town the MBTA was, in fact, ready to fund the project and put it out to bid. It appears Winchester's local delegates helped keep the project on track.

"I want to thank Senator (Patricia) Jehlen and Representative (Michael) Day for their strong advocacy to help restore the funding," Sen. Lewis remarked just before the project took off. "I also want to thank the board and the community."

Clearly, the project could have gone off the rails (pun intended) several times, but strong advocacy from the town's local politicians and town government kept the project moving forward (even if at a slower than preferred pace).

Even as the project nears the finish line, it should be noted the original plan called for construction to last 29 months. This means the MBTA should have completed the work already; instead, they continue to push to finish by December, almost four years after the transit authority received the initial demolition permit.

To be honest, with the MBTA footing the entire bill (minus a few add-ons requested by the town), any delays only hurt them. And, they could have abandoned the project a number of times as it became more and more expensive.

"We're appreciative of the MBTA for sticking with us," then-Select Board Chair Michael Bettencourt announced back in January of 2021, realizing the T suffered revenue issues related to the pandemic. "The team really pushed it over the goal line."

Representatives for the MBTA visit the Select Board every few months with updates. Back in February of this year, the team said everything remains on schedule.

Rae told the Select Board about the most recent activity the MBTA completed, over the fall, which included platform installation, steel beam installation, west headhouse construction, elevator glass installation, cleaning the stormwater, and masonry wall work along Thompson Street.

Just this week, he returned to the board with another update. He outlined what the MBTA accomplished over the spring to include outbound headhouse work in the Aberjona and Waterfield parking lots, work on the Aberjona ramp, work on the platform and stairway at the Aberjona side of the headhouse, and platform bridge work looking north over Waterfield Road.

Landscaping work is scheduled for next year.

For the remainder of this year, residents can expect continued steel, electrical, concrete, and plumbing work focused on the south end of the station on both the east and west headhouses, Aberjona ramp and mid-stair on Laraway Road, and inbound and outbound platforms; steel work, elevator and staircase construction on the north end of the station; and continued noise from the construction activity including heavy equipment and machinery.

By September, the MBTA plans to finish work on the platform level to include panels, canopy steel, electrical, lighting, communications, signage, and benches; and the parking lot sections to include elevator construction, plumbing and electrical work, communications, stairways, ramp placement, and parking lot restoration.

By December, the MBTA is scheduled to finish plumbing, electrical and structural steel, plus elevator, stairs and the platform behind Thompson Street and the Quill Rotary. Finally, the MBTA will complete work in the Laraway Road section: construct ramps, the platform and the stairway and install structural steel and utilities.

For anyone interested in more information, the town and MBTA will host a public information meeting on June 25 via Zoom at 6 p.m. Interested parties can visit mbta.com/winchesterstation to participate or scan the QR code on the town's website at https://www.winchester.us/CivicAlerts.aspx?AID=1714.

The project team plans an update on the completed construction activities to date and what work is anticipated in the coming months. They could also alert residents to any delays.

Middlesex Sheriff Office celebrates graduation of 18 new correction officers

MEDFORD — The Middlesex Sheriff's Office (MSO) welcomed 18 new correction officers during a ceremony held June 6 at Tufts University.

The graduation ceremony for the 50th Basic Training Academy (BTA) featured a keynote address by Middlesex Sheriff Peter J. Koutoujian as well as powerful remarks by Medford Police Chief Jack Buckley and Tufts University Executive Director of Public Safety and Chief of Police Yolanda Smith.

"For 332 years, members of the Middlesex Sheriff's Office have played a vital role in ensuring public safety," said Sheriff Koutoujian. "While the challenges we face evolve, our mission remains the same: to keep those in our care safe, and prepare them to return to their families — and our communities — ready to be productive and engaged citizens. I have no doubt that these 18 new officers will ensure we carry out that mission with dignity, pride, and professionalism."

The new class of officers features nine individuals with familial law enforcement connections; five with post-secondary degrees; and four with military experience. In addition, seven of the new officers are bilingual (Spanish, Portuguese, Haitian Creole, Chinese, French and Vietnamese).

The ceremony followed a rigorous 13-and-a half week academy during which recruits underwent extensive training. The academy included both classroom and hands on work, as well as the mastering of policies, procedures, and skills needed to maintain safety and security.

The training focused on topics such as implicit bias, Mental Health First Aid, Cognitive Behavioral Theory (CBT), de-escalation and communication, first responder training, suicide prevention, and defensive tactics. In addition, all 18 recruits spent time working with veteran members of the MSO team during their on-the-job training at the Middlesex Jail & House of Correction.

The June 6 graduation was the 16th held during Sheriff Koutoujian's tenure and the fourth since February of 2023.

Historic season ends for WILDCATS

Girls tennis makes deepest playoff run in program history

By JASON COOKE

LEXINGTON — When Christina Woods was named the Wilmington High girls tennis coach just months before the 2023 season, the rookie bench boss wasn't exactly inheriting a dynasty.

In fact, the 2022 Wildcats posted just one win the year prior. The Wilmington native yearned to hit the reset button.

The goal during that first season at the helm was to simply beat that win total — which she did.

The 'Cats formulated four wins, earning themselves a spot in the Div. 3 state tournament due to their gauntlet of a schedule in the Middlesex League.

So heading into her second campaign at the helm, the goal remained the same: improve upon the preceding win mark.

But Woods had no idea what would transpire in the next two months.

After dropping its first pair of matches of the spring, Wilmington took off.

Winners in 11 of their subsequent 14 contests, the Wildcats found themselves ranked No. 1 in Div. 3. They cruised into the postseason atop the 36 teams in the field, boasting an 11-5 record through three playoff victories.

It's the kind of turnaround that can't be fully comprehended until it's over.

Ultimately, a 4-1 defeat to No. 4 Weston in the Final Four last Wednesday at Lexington High School put everything into perspective for the young coach.

"I'm very proud of them," said Woods after the match. "After last season, this was a huge improvement. They can't be mad with this match because of the outcome of their season. This was a big accomplishment for us to get to the Final Four."

Wednesday's loss marked the furthest the Wildcats have ever advanced into the state tournament. Instead of sulking over the loss, Woods and her players were beaming with pride.

"We're all very happy even though we lost this one," said the coach. "We're ending on a happy note because this was a great season."

Wilmington grabbed its lone win against Weston thanks to Shubhangi Tripathi's gritty win over Maya Roseh in third singles, capturing a 10-8 tiebreaker after a 2-6, 6-4 showing in the first two sets.

Tripathi and her opponent were the last players remaining on the courts, and Weston's 4-0 lead had already punched their ticket to the state championship, later falling to No. 3 Pembroke on Saturday in the title match.

But Tripathi — in familiar fashion — fought until the end.

The junior wouldn't be denied.

"She is a fighter," said Woods. "We've learned that this whole season. She's done that maybe four matches now, where she just fights until the end. She'll pull through for her teammates. She's a team player, and I'm excited to have her next year as a senior."

Weston's skilled lineup got the best of Wilmington's remaining roster, downing Savannah Beatrice (6-0, 6-3) at first singles, Jaslene Ryou (6-3, 6-2) at second singles, Sophia LaVita and Madison Benoit (6-0, 6-1) at No. 1 doubles, and Maria Cummings and Allison D'Arco (6-1, 6-1) at second doubles.

Cummings, one of Wilmington's five seniors, proved to be a mentor to first-year D'Arco in second doubles this season.

"She played with a freshman, so she was Allison's guide this year," said Woods. "She played great with her because she has that personality, and she was a good leader to her."

Cummings joined Benoit and LaVita as team captains, leading the way to perhaps the best season in program history.

"They were great captains this year," said Woods. "They came into it ready to win and they wanted a different outcome than last year. Maddie and Sophia have been playing together for four years now, so they were a great first doubles team."

Wilmington will also graduate seniors Katherine Murphy and Priscilla Vo.

But the future is bright for Woods and the Wildcats, who will return the entirety of their singles lineup next year in another attempt to raise the bar.

"I'm already excited for next season," concluded Woods.

Walsh guides Bedford to softball semifinals

Wilmington resident coached Bucs past Tewksbury, into Final Four

By JASON COOKE
Sports Correspondent
sports@yourtowncrier.com

TEWKSBURY — Bedford High softball coach Dennis Walsh had all the motivation in the world headed into last Sunday's Div. 3 tournament clash with No. 2 Tewksbury.

As Walsh and the No. 7 Bucs stepped off their bus at Hazel Field in Tewksbury to meet the hundreds lining the fence for the highly anticipated Sunday night showdown, they stared their unfinished business directly in the eye.

Tewksbury downed Walsh's squad on that very stage last June in the Elite 8, sending the Bucs home and the Redmen just one win away from the state championship.

That was all the bulletin board material necessary to pull the upset.

But Walsh had another motive — a more personal one. One that never fades, regardless of where his coaching career takes him.

The long-time Bedford skipper is a Wilmington native. The desire to beat rival Tewksbury is in his blood.

In the end, Walsh killed two birds with one stone, as the Bucs prevailed, 2-0, over the Redmen to send Bedford to the Final Four.

"I'm a Wilmington kid, so Tewksbury always has a space in my heart that I want to win," Walsh said after Bedford's 2-0 triumph.

A 1991 graduate of Wilmington High School, Walsh was a standout catcher and quarterback on the 'Cats varsity baseball and football squads before beginning his coaching career in Bedford in 1998 as a freshman softball coach.

In 2012, he took over as the varsity bench boss. He's been coaching ever since.

Sunday's win over Tewksbury isn't just the furthest Walsh has advanced in the state tournament in his tenure, but it's Bedford's first Final Four appearance since 1990.

That's quite the accomplishment for Walsh. And he did it against his longtime nemesis.

Headlined by the dominant outing from starting pitcher Alyxandra Rossi, totaling a complete game shutout with 16 strikeouts, Bedford silenced an experienced Tewksbury lineup from start to finish.

The Boston College commit allowed just two hits.

"It's huge," said Walsh after the win. "Every year we thought we were building, and building, and building, and there are some really good girls who were coming up this year that went somewhere else. We lost our shortstop in the preseason in our first week of practice. So we were pretty thin. It's awesome."

Walsh and the Bucs boast just one senior in their lineup, lacking significant postseason experience. In the other dugout? Tewksbury was coming off a pair of runs to the state championship game, led by six seniors who had been through it all.

How often did that cross Waslh's mind throughout Sunday's dogfight?

"Every minute," he said.

But it didn't matter. Bedford scored two runs in the first inning on a two-run single from Lexi Masters, and it's all the doctor ordered to punch their ticket to the next round.

"You heard the energy," said Walsh. "It was loud. They're always loud, but today we were bringing it. No one was afraid. it was pretty cool.

"Last year, they were so good and they came out and played so good. We didn't, and I don't think we were ready for the stage. Today, I felt right off the bat we were ready."

Bedford wasn't scared of Tewksbury — and that was evident from Bedford athletic director Keith Mangan before the game even started.

"I knew it was going to be a better game this year than it was last year," said Mangan.

Since being named athletic director in 2002, Mangan has been with Walsh every step of his coaching career. His dedication to Bedford athletics was apparent from the first time they met.

"He does a great job," said Mangan. "He's fully committed to the program. He's fully engaged, and he's focused. He's very passionate about what he does, and he works hard to try and get as much out of the kids as he can."

But while Walsh coached his team from the dugout itching to knock off his arch-rival, Mangan was caught in the crossfire. A Tewksbury resident with two children, Cullen and Kallie, who are active athletes at Tewksbury High School, Mangan's experience was slightly different.

"It was more fun for him," Mangan said with a laugh. "Not as fun for me."

Bedford ended up falling to Walpole in the state semifinals by a 1-0 score. Walpole would eventually win the state title with another 1-0 victory in the championship game.

Nonetheless, Walsh and his Bedford team had a year to remember.

"Winning this is awesome, but the kids did it," concluded Walsh. "I just sit on the bucket."

Tickets for the game are just $10 for adults, $7 for fans 15-years-old and under and free for youth football players and children under 3-year-old.

Parking is free and there are refreshments at the game.

The Longhorns led 8-6 at halftime and then took a 16-6 lead on an interception return for a touchdown by Deshawne Browne.

Former Burlington High standout quarterback Khyle Pena is on the roster for the Longhorns as is former Woburn standout Chucky Ortiz.

The next two games for the Longhorns include a June 29 trip to Daly Field in Boston to face the Golden Badgers and a July 20 home game against the Rhody Ravens at Woburn High.

The 10-game season lasts until early September.
